WHYMAP was created in 1999 as a contribution to worldwide efforts to improve the assessment and management of the Earth’s water resources, including groundwater, with the German Federal Institute for Geosciences and Natural Resources as the leading institution. WHYMAP is a joint programme of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, the Commission for the Geological Map of the World, the International Association of Hydrogeologists and the IAEA.

For further information: www.whymap.org.